

Meet the Mamas

Isabelle
Corporate Queen

View Bio

Read Blog

View All Picks

Sydney
Artistic Adventurer

View Bio

Read Blog

View All Picks

Allie
Seeker of Simplicity

View Bio

Read Blog

View All Picks

Eliza
Urban Fashionista

View Bio

Read Blog

View All Picks

This week's Mamas Picks:

Tee Time

No matter the cause, no matter how long that 10K actually felt or how fun the party was, I've learned to say no thank you to the complimentary t-shirts. But even without accruing another crew-neck, the tide of tees is far too high. Enter two faves to save the shelf/planet: Barney's and Loomstate have partnered to recycle my tower of terrible tees. Simply drop your top at Barney's and Loomstate will re-fashion it for a new 2008 Holiday Collection. The result

Right to Drink

Shelter. Food. Water. Most of us may be blessed with this hallowed trinity of human must-haves, but for one billion of Earth's inhabitants, an unquenchable thirst is a perpetual plight. With a single, crystalline drop suspended from a reclaimed-silver faucet, this necklace from Linda Loudermilk poignantly poignates the fragility and exigence of fresh water. In honor of -- and with proceeds pro - - the Water is a Human Right campaign, Linda Loudermilk reminds

Couture Collage

To take pre-existing elements and combine them -- reworking previously discrete aspects into an enticingly fresh configuration requires artistry... creativity... motivation... inspiration. Matisse did it. Frank Lloyd Wright did it. Dance club DJs do it. Eco-conscious designer Anna Mkhitarian is doing it -- and in superlative earth-honoring style. Pieces from previous prom wear, repurposed relics and remnants, wardrobe bits acquired worldwide,

The Froote of Our Labor

The apple never falls far from the tree, and the creators of Froote Jewelry have their hearts in just the right place. The result of putting the planet's needs on par with our own? Beautiful, eco-conscious creations borne from an earth-friendly philosophy of using only untreated stones, ethical production methods and totally green manufacturing. Maybe best of all, Froote's three distinct lines -- celebrating the sensual, may not be free, but (and no names here) infinitely better than rockin' that frayed fraternity thing.

 Read my blog

 See My Red Ribbon Picks

those of us privileged with potability: Water, water may be everywhere, but for many, there's not a drop to drink.

 Read my blog

 See My Red Ribbon Picks

discarded gems and jewels in Anna's able hands find fashion fruition -- taking reuse to righteous new levels.

 Read my blog

 See My Red Ribbon Picks

the spiritual and the sublime -- hold most sacred the femininity of the women who wear them. If only all gems were such genius...

 Read my blog

 See My Red Ribbon Picks

Read Today's Dish: Evolution of Eco-Fashion

Contact Us

Submit Your Cravings

About Us

Advertising

Join PoshCravings!

ADVERTISEMENT

Custom-made.

ADVERTISEMENT

Doesn't your baby deserve the very best?

Take a short survey for a chance to win the Ultimate Baby Nursery or $50,000!

Click Here To Enter Now!

From the creators of PoshTots - Extraordinary Furniture and Bedding for Baby and Child: pregnancy fashion, celebrity shopping, family, baby, travel, food, lifestyle, community and more!

Terms and Conditions - Privacy Policy

Copyright © 2006-2007 PoshCravings.com c/o PoshTots, Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Sunday, April 27, 2008